SNAPS FOR SINNERS

Tonight's show with Steve Poltz gets RiverRoots 2019 underway

Steve Poltz kicks off RiverRoots tonight, June 6, at Bicentennial Park with a free concert.

Here is how Poltz describes himself:

"In 20 years since his full-length solo debut, One Left Shoe, he blessed the world's ears with twelve solo records, spanning the acclaimed 2010 Dreamhouse and most recently Folk Singer in 2015. NPR summed it up best, "Critics and fans alike now regard Poltz as a talented and prolific songwriter." By 2016, he survived a stroke, endured anything the music industry could throw at him, and still performed like "280 days a year."

In the end, for everything you can call him "searcher, smartass, movie freak, lover of technology, news junkie, baseball fan to nth degree, lapsed Catholic who still believes in God even though all his friends are atheists and think he's an idiot, and maker of fun," you might just call Steve that little light in the dark we all need in this day and age.

"Or Nashville's Canadian Jiminy Cricket."

See Charlie's Beat, Page A7, for a look at two more of this year's RiverRoots acts.

RiverRoots details

RiverRoots kicks off tonight, June 6, with a free concert at 7 p.m. featuring Steve Poltz.

The music Friday, June 7, kicks off at 5:30 p.m. It features Suitcase Junket at 5:30, Charley Crockett at 6:45, Jeri Katherine Howell at 7:30 (in the Jam Tent), Todd Snider at 8 and Chris Knight at 9:30.

The music Saturday, June 8, begins at 2 p.m. It features Snaps for Sinners at 2, Paleface at 3:30, Arlo McKinley and The Lonesome Sound at 5, Parsonsfield at 6:30, Slippery Creek at 7:30 (in the Jam Tent), Scythian at 8 and The Milk Carton Kids at 9:30.

RiverRoots organizers want to remind concert-goers of a few housekeeping details for the festival:

- No alcohol brought in or taken out
- No weapons
- No bikes, skateboards or minibikes
- Only service dogs admitted

Check riverroots.org for updates during the weekend.

Appeals court upholds ruling in White Barn permit lawsuit

By PEGGY VLEREBOME
Special to the Courier

The Indiana Court of Appeals has upheld a Jefferson Circuit Court ruling that the owners of the White Barn Venue should have received a conditional use permit from the Madison Board of Zoning Appeals last year.

Owners Bryan and Shelly Dews appealed the zoning board's denial of a conditional use permit to the circuit court. In Indiana, zoning boards are quasi-judicial, so any appeals go to the circuit court.

Eight residents near the event venue at Thomas Hill and Goins roads had complained to the zoning board about traffic, noise, lights, property values and disruption of their rural lifestyle. The residents — Mark Goley, Jennifer and William Ison, Sherry and Gary Smith, Nancy and Keith Alexander, and Kathy Ayers — became intervenors in the court proceedings.

After special judge W. Gregory Coy of Switzerland County ruled that White Barn Venue was wronged by the Zoning Board of Appeals (BZA), the intervenors appealed his granting of the conditional use permit to the Court of Appeals. A conditional use permit is required in order to stay open for business.

The Court of Appeals issued its ruling May 15. The appeals court ruling was a memorandum decision. Online legal dictionaries define a memorandum decision as one in which a court states its decision but usually does not state its reasons for the decision. A memorandum decision is not subject to appeal to a higher court, according to the dictionaries.

In this case, the Court of Appeals included a conclusion at the end: "The BZA's decision to deny the conditional use permit application by White Barn is not supported by substantial evidence and was arbitrary and capricious. We affirm the trial court's reversal of the BZA's decision."

The conditional use permit granted by Coy allowed the White Barn venue to operate until its expiration this year. The Zoning Board of Appeals this year granted a one-year renewal. Most conditional use permits are required to be renewed annually.

Medication and syringe dropoff this Saturday at KDH

MADISON — The second medication/syringe dropoff of the year is set for Saturday at King's Daughters' Hospital on Madison's hilltop. Individuals can bring old, unused and unwanted medications and syringes to the medical office side of KDH from 10 a.m. until noon — no questions asked. This event will take place a total of four times this year. It is sponsored by KDH, the Jefferson County Health Department, Jefferson County Sheriff's Office, Madison Police Department and Hanover Police Department. Dropping items off is free. Individuals can also take used syringes to the health department on Green Road any normal business day from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. to drop them off if needed.

Public input sought on historic preservation

INDIANAPOLIS — The Indiana Division of Historic Preservation & Archaeology is conducting an online survey to gather public input regarding upcoming projects and initiatives. It says its Cultural Resources Management Plan is a comprehensive state plan that guides local preservationists, state officials and others in their efforts to preserve Indiana's heritage resources including historic downtowns and neighborhoods, bridges, cemeteries, schools, round barns and other rural sites, theaters and archaeological sites. The agency is currently revising its plan for 2020-2026. Those without internet access can connect to the survey at any public library, or they can request a paper copy by mail by calling Steve Kennedy at 317-232-6981. Completed survey forms must be returned to the agency by June 30. People can access the survey online at https://www.in.gov/dnr/historic/10147.htm

GOP caucus picks new House member

INDIANAPOLIS — A former gubernatorial aide has been picked to replace a retiring member of the Indiana House. Republican precinct committee members voted in a caucus Tuesday night for Dollyne Sherman to fill the seat given up by longtime Rep. David Frizzell. Sherman will represent District 93 that covers part of Indianapolis' south side and neighboring Johnson County. Sherman worked for Republican Govs. Robert Orr and Mitch Daniels, along with GOP U.S. Rep. Susan Brooks. She defeated six other candidates to complete Frizzell's term, which runs until the November 2020 election. Frizzell was first elected to the House in 1992. He announced in April he was resigning midterm to spend more time with his ill wife. Republicans hold a commanding 67-33 House majority.

Body found in lake ID'd as Indiana man

PORTAGE — Authorities say a body found in Lake Michigan near a park in northwestern Indiana has been identified as that of a man missing since February. The Indiana Department of Natural Resources says a boater found the body on Friday near the Portage Lakefront park. It was recovered by the U.S. Coast Guard and an autopsy conducted this week by the Porter County Coroner's Office confirmed the identity as Scott Tharp, 59 of Gary. The coroner's office says the preliminary cause of death was determined to be drowning. Authorities say Tharp had been missing from the Miller Beach area since Feb. 11. Indiana Conservation Officers and Gary police are investigating.

Privileges denied after conviction in crash

CROWN POINT — A northwestern Indiana judge has rejected driving privileges for a man convicted in a 2012 hit-and-run crash that killed a corrections officer. Jason Cozmanoff, 49, was released from prison last year after serving part of his 12-year sentence for reckless homicide and other convictions. Cozmanoff's sentence specified that his driving privileges be suspended for three years following his release from prison in the March 2012 hit-and-run crash that killed Lake County Corrections Officer Britney Meux and injured three other officers. The (Northwest Indiana) Times reports that Cozmanoff was seeking special post-release driving privileges, in part so that he could drive to job sites across northern Indiana for his work as a bricklayer. But a Lake County judge on Monday rejected that request, which prosecutors had opposed.

Officer apologizes for Halloween costume

CLARKSVILLE — A police captain has apologized for a blackface Halloween costume and his department plans to update sensitivity training following the disclosure. The News and Tribune reports it was recently made aware of Facebook photos showing Clarksville Capt. Joel DeMoss, a 20-year veteran of the department who is white, dressed as rapper Kanye West, who is black. The officer said in a statement Tuesday that he and his wife attended a party four years ago dressed as West and his wife, Kim Kardashian, and he was "uneducated on the meaning of blackface." He says he's since educated himself on the history of blackface and it's something he'd "never do again." Recent disclosures about people wearing blackface have angered and frustrated many black people, who say it's mocking and demeaning.

Man appeals convictions in double murder

ALBION — A northeastern Indiana man convicted of fatally shooting two people while trying to retrieve a luxury purse is appealing his convictions and 170-year sentence. The appeal filed by Michael J. Johnson of Fort Wayne includes a request that the Indiana Court of Appeals either reverse his two murder convictions or reduce them to voluntary manslaughter and cut his sentence to 70 years. The (Kendallville) News-Sun reports that Johnson's appeal raises five issues, including whether his 170-year sentence was appropriate. Johnson was sentenced in January following his murder convictions in the March 2018 killings of Justin Adams, 30, and Amanda Feldstein, 39, in Ligonier. Authorities say Johnson fatally shot them during an attempt to retrieve a Prada purse worth nearly $10,000 that was stolen from his car.

STATE BRIEFS

Unsupervised probation for leaving racist letter

KOKOMO — A woman who police say admitted leaving a racist letter at the home of a family with a biracial son has been sentenced to 180 days of unsupervised probation. Deborah Cantwell, 63 of Greentown, pleaded guilty Tuesday to misdemeanor charges of criminal mischief and harassment in Howard Superior Court. Judge Doug Tate also ordered her to attend counseling for what he referred to as her "biases." The charges stem from an October incident in which the father of a 15-year-old boy told authorities his family's home had been toilet-papered and a letter left at a door containing a racial slur and a desire for a "white neighborhood." The Kokomo Tribune reports the targeted family issued a statement to the court saying it believed Cantwell's sentence was too lenient.

Nurse who battered patient gets probation

MUNCIE — A nurse convicted of battering a hospital stroke patient has been sentenced to six months of probation. A Delaware County judge gave Nathaniel Abraham Mosco, 28, a 180-day suspended sentence Monday and ordered him to serve 180 days of probation and perform 180 hours of community service. Mosco was accused of sexually assaulting a now 72-year-old woman who was being treated last year for a stroke at Muncie's IU Health Ball Memorial Hospital. A jury acquitted the Hartford City man last month of sexual battery, but convicted him on a misdemeanor battery count. The Star Press reports that the victim had told authorities that Mosco, whose nursing license has been suspended, had fondled her genitalia. She testified Monday that the alleged incident has left her with nightmares.

Homeless camp empties after eviction notice

GOSHEN — Officials and community organizations are helping to get housing and services for homeless people in a northern Indiana city who formerly lived at a homeless camp that's being emptied. The Goshen News reports the camp along Goshen's millrace was mostly empty Monday when a 48-hour eviction notice period went into effect. Anyone remaining in the camp will be removed Wednesday and their property put into storage, but most if not all already have left. Homeless advocate John Shafer says city officials and the Homeless Task Force and Homeless Coalition did a good job relocating the people in the camp. Scott Shank, 51, was at the camp Monday to load up his possessions. He says he's recently been staying with friends after living earlier in a makeshift cabin in the woods.

Kentucky

Man accused of impersonating police

LOUISVILLE — A man is accused of impersonating a police officer and pointing a gun at two people on separate occasions. News outlets report Christopher Flannery, 28, was arrested over the weekend and charged with wanton endangerment and impersonating an officer. His LinkedIn says he's an Army veteran and former jailer who owns a security company called Reaper Tactics. An arrest report says Flannery was driving around Saturday with an emergency light on his vehicle and attempted to pull over another car. It says he then pulled alongside the vehicle and pointed a gun at the victim before driving off. The victim took note of his license plate, which authorities used to track him down. Louisville police say a police impersonator matching Flannery's description acted similarly last month.

Barrel maker starts building cooperage

FRANKFORT — A barrel manufacturer has started construction on a $66.5 million cooperage in eastern Kentucky that's expected to create 220 jobs in coming years. The Commonwealth Cooperage being built at Morehead by Independent Stave Co. is another sign of growth in the state's bourbon industry. Gov. Matt Bevin's office says groundbreaking for the new cooperage was Tuesday. Commonwealth Cooperage will produce white oak barrels for the bourbon and whiskey industries using locally manufactured staves. Bourbon is aged in charred oak barrels. The cooperage at Morehead will become the company's third in the state, joining the 500-employee Kentucky Cooperage in Lebanon and a used-barrel cooperage in Louisville.Independent Stave also owns two stave mills in Kentucky — the 120-employee Morehead Wood Products facility and Benton Wood Products in Marshall County.

Man accused of beating infant

RICHMOND — A Kentucky man is accused of punching his infant daughter and repeatedly slamming the 3-month-old on the ground, causing 27 bone fractures and other injuries. News outlets report 24-year-old Sean Dykes was arrested Thursday and charged with abuse of a minor and domestic violence. An arrest report says authorities responding to a report of a wounded infant last week found the girl with fractures, bruises, bleeding in her eyes and other possible internal injuries. Richmond Police Assistant Chief Rodney Richardson said "it's unimaginable that a father could do this to their daughter." Dykes also was accused in March of shoving his girlfriend and her mother to the ground and attempting to strangle one of them. He's being held without bail. It's unclear if he has a lawyer.

Crossbow season for deer extended

FRANKFORT — Deer hunters in Kentucky are getting a longer crossbow season, after a proposal to expand the season went into effect May 31. The new crossbow season will open the third Saturday in September and close the third Monday in January. This year it's Sept. 21 to Jan. 20. A statement from the state Fish and Wildlife Division says the longer season is a way to tap into the popularity of crossbow hunting in recent years. The state agency says overharvesting is not a concern as bag limits are in place. The new regulation also allows all youth hunters 15 and younger to hunt deer with a crossbow during the entire archery season. The archery season for deer starts the first Saturday in September and ends the third Monday in January.

Court OKs transfer of control of hospital

PINEVILLE — A troubled southeastern Kentucky hospital that was in danger of closing has gotten a reprieve. News outlets report a bankruptcy court approved a deal Monday that transferred the Southeastern Medical Center in Pineville from its current operator to the hospital's bankruptcy trustee and the City of Pineville agreed to loan the new, nonprofit operator $300,000 to keep the hospital open for 60 days while the trustee secures a deal with a buyer. The hospital's current operator, Pineville Medical Center, Inc., has struggled to keep up with operations and finances. It hasn't paid employees in about eight weeks and lost its contract last month with the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services. Pineville Medical Center attorney James Irving said the hospital would likely have closed without the court's action.

'All about convenience,' says bill's author

Sunday alcohol sales net little revenue impact

By SCOTT L. MILEY
CNHI News Indiana Reporter

INDIANAPOLIS — Hoosiers who run dry on alcohol for weekend boating excursions or when gathering for a Colts game may be among those who appreciate the now yearlong availability of alcohol on Sundays.

Since March 2018, Hoosiers have been able to buy carryout alcohol on Sundays under legislation that knocked down former blue laws that limited alcohol access in the state.

As a compromise to avoid sales during regular church hours and as a way to help liquor store owners control overtime, the legislature agreed to limit sales from noon to 8 p.m. Cold beer, however, is allowed only at package liquor stores.

Todd Antz opens his two Keg Liquors stores, one in Clarksville and one in New Albany, at noon on Sundays but he shuts the doors at 5 p.m.

"We thought what the sweet spot of the day would be," said Antz, who was named retailer of the year for 2018 by the Indiana Association of Beverage Retailers. "If people are doing Sunday activities, that's probably about the time they're going to start winding down, getting ready for the work week."

Although he had to hire new employees for Sundays, his five-hour opening cuts down on overtime.

"For us, it's pretty much been a wash," Antz said. "We've seen a decrease in sales on Saturdays and Mondays. Sunday just kind of makes up for it. It's been relatively flat for us overall."

About eight years ago, a Ball State University researcher predicted that one-fourth of Indiana's liquor stores could go out of business if Sunday sales were allowed.

By one recent count, there's one less liquor store permit in Indiana than there was in 2017. Two years ago, there were 1,044 liquor store permits compared to a current count of 1,043, said Scott Imus, executive director of the Indiana Food and Fuel Association, which represents petroleum marketers and convenience stores.

Sunday availability has led to a positive "small tick" in sales for his members.

"Certainly consumers have been happy with it. I think they wish it would start a little earlier (on Sundays) like it does every other day of the week. But, by and large, they're glad to be rid of that inconvenience," Imus said.

Indiana brought in $51.5 million in alcoholic beverage tax revenue in 2018, up 4 percent from the $49.4 million in 2017, according to the Indiana Department of Revenue.

In April, the State Budget Agency predicted a slim increase in state general fund tax revenue from alcoholic beverage sales – including beer, wine and liquor – to $20 million in 2019 from the actual $19.2 million in 2018. Two percent growth was forecast for 2020 at $20.4 million and a 2.5 percent increase forecast to $20.9 million in 2021. The remainder of excise tax revenues from alcohol sales is allocated to cities and towns.

The Department of Revenue did not respond to a request for a breakdown of the impact of Sunday sales.

Supporters of Sunday sales during the 2018 Indiana General Assembly never promised additional revenue nor economic development for the state, backers recall.

"It's all about customer convenience," said state Sen. Ron Alting, R-Lafayette, author of the Sunday sales legislation. "It's not an economic development tool.

"The states that went seven days versus six had always advised ... when I reached out to them that, in the end result, you do the same amount of sales in seven that you do in six."

A push for cold beer in convenience stores might be on the legislative horizon in Indiana, Imus said.

"The time has come; it's way overdue. Nothing negative happened when Sunday sales were announced, and everybody has their customers. Nothing negative will happen if cold beer sales are a reality," he contended.

Trade war comes to Louisville, Jack Daniels takes tariff hit

By BRUCE SCHREINER

LOUISVILLE (AP) — Led by strong sales for its whiskey and tequila brands, Brown-Forman Corp. reported higher fourth-quarter net income Wednesday despite taking a hit from the Trump administration's tariff fight.

The Louisville-based company — best known for its Jack Daniel's Tennessee Whiskey brand — said tariff-related price adjustments shaved 1 percentage point off its full-year net sales growth.

But the company showed its resilience to the trade disputes by posting robust sales growth in emerging global markets. It also posted growth in the highly competitive U.S. market.

American whiskey producers face stiff retaliatory tariffs in the European Union, the industry's biggest export market, as part of the Trump administration's trade disputes. It's a headache that's continuing into the company's new fiscal year.

Brown-Forman products account for a big share of the American whiskey business into Europe, said Lawson Whiting, the company's president and CEO.

"So we view these tariffs really from the EU as a targeted campaign right at Brown-Forman, an American business headquartered in Kentucky," Whiting said in a conference call with industry analysts.

The company said it's assuming tariffs remain in place for all of the current fiscal year, compared to about seven months of tariff impact in the just-ended fiscal year. Brown-Forman's earnings-per-share projection for the new fiscal year is in the range of $1.75 to $1.85.

American spirits producers hit by EU tariffs face the choice of either passing along the tax to European customers and risk losing market share, or absorbing tariff-related costs, which can mean smaller profits.

Brown-Forman chose to absorb the costs in most countries in the just-ended fiscal year to continue sales momentum, and it currently plans to continue doing so heading into the new fiscal year, said Jane Morreau, the company's chief financial officer.

Foreign markets account for slightly more than half of Brown-Forman's overall sales.

Jon Menke Award

Now 95, Madison vet honored for WWII service

By TALI HUNT

Corporal Arthur Martin, a 95-year-old World War II veteran, received a standing ovation, awards and many thanks for the sacrifices he made as a 19-year-old serving in General Patton's 3rd Army in the Rhineland area of Germany.

Martin is the 2019 Jon Menke Award for Military Service recipient.

Martin said he was not upset when he was drafted in 1943.

"It was my time to go," he said simply.

His wife of nearly 72 years, Lyda, said they knew there was a good chance his letter calling him to duty would come and that they knew they'd have to live with the changes it brought to their lives. Lyda was still in high school when Arthur was drafted and they were dating at the time.

"I still remember his serial number because I wrote it so many times," Lyda Martin said, speaking of the letters she wrote to him while he was training at Camp Polk in Louisiana and when he was in Europe.

Martin was a Sherman Tank gunner in the 18th Tank Battalion of the 8th Armored Division. He served as part of the campaign that liberated the area of Germany to the west of the Rhine River, which was the greatest natural obstacle the Western Allies faced in advancing further into German territory after crossing the English Channel.

Martin's battalion left Camp Polk around Christmastime 1944. They landed in England, then immediately set out for the Rhineland. Martin was injured in a mortar attack on Jan. 25, 1945.

"I pulled myself out and my sergeant caught me as I fell off the tank," said Martin, whose body was littered with pieces of shrapnel. He was taken off the battlefield and had three surgeries in three months as a result of his injuries.

Martin still carries dozens of shrapnel pieces inside him today. He was awarded the Purple Heart Medal for the injuries he sustained in battle.

"We couldn't really roughhouse with Dad when we were kids," said Robin Ferree, one of the Martin daughters. "If we'd ever start to get too rough, we'd get the warnings to 'take it easy with Daddy.'"

Ferree explained that Martin is missing some of his ribs in his back over his heart. This is another lifetime injury that happened as a result of the mortar attack. Ferree also recalled a time when the family was ice skating and her father fell.

"That was a very scary time for us," said Ferree.

Ferree grew up in Madison with her parents and her sisters, Diane Yoke and Melissa Allen. The Martins moved to Madison for work in 1960. Martin was employed at Grote Industries in Belleview, Kentucky, and he moved to stay on in the company's accounting department when the company merged two locations into a new Madison locale.

"Madison is a wonderful place to live and to raise a family," said Lyda Martin.

Martin's mother worked in the factory for Grote in Belleview and each of his daughters worked summer jobs in different areas of the company when they were teenagers. Some of Grote's leadership was present this week to thank Martin for his service not only as an employee, but as an American hero.

"I still call this place 'home,'" said Ferree, who lives in Colorado.

Arthur and Lyda Martin used to enjoy Madison's festivals and other events. Their favorite annual events were Regatta and Chautauqua, she said.

"We can't walk around like we used to, so we really just get out to find something to eat," said Lyda Martin. "We used to be big golfers, too."

Diane and her husband, Ed, live in Indianapolis. Melissa, who was known by her family as Missy, passed away in 2015 after a battle with cancer. She was married to Steve Allen, who lives near Grand Rapids, Michigan. Arthur and Lyda Martin have six grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Martin was surrounded by family members Tuesday evening as he was presented by the City of Madison with the Jon Menke Award and with other honors from members of the Major Samuel Woodfill Post #9 of the American Legion and the Indiana State Senate.

The Menke award honors the memory of Jon Menke, a Madison native who died in 2008 while serving in Iraq with the National Guard. The American Legion gave Martin small replicas of is medals. The State of Indiana and Indiana General Assembly proclamation given Martin by State Sen. Chris Garten said "Arthur Martin truly exemplifies what it means to be a Hoosier."

D-Day succeeded thanks to an ingenious design

By COLIN FLINT

When Allied troops stormed the beaches at Normandy, France on June 6, 1944 – a bold invasion of Nazi-held territory that helped tip the balance of World War II – they were using a remarkable and entirely untested technology: artificial ports.

To stage what was then the largest seaborne assault in history, the American, British and Canadian armies needed to get at least 150,000 soldiers, military personnel and all their equipment ashore on day one of the invasion.

Reclaiming France's coastline was just the first challenge. After that, Allied troops planned to fight their way across the fields of France to liberate Paris and, finally, onto Berlin, where they would converge with the Soviet army to defeat Hitler.

When Gen. Dwight Eisenhower and his advisers pressed for this ambitious invasion of Nazi-occupied France, British Prime Minister Winston Churchill was dubious.

COULD IT BE DONE?

Such an operation would require more than a million soldiers – all equipped with weapons, ammunition, food and clothing – plus hundreds of thousands of vehicles, tents and medical personnel.

Getting so many people and materials from ship to shore while battling waves, tides and currents presented an enormous logistical challenge.

Churchill, recalling the failed marine campaign to capture Gallipoli during World War I, feared that Allied troops would get trapped on the beaches and be sitting ducks for the German soldiers awaiting atop Normandy's cliffs.

So Churchill demanded that a team of engineers, scientists and military officers design a marine staging area that could actually support a successful operation.

The team's solution was ingenious: two easy-to-assemble artificial ports where Allied ships could safely anchor to stage the massive operation.

As I write in my 2016 book on what became known as the "Mulberry Harbours," each of these artificial ports consisted of artificial breakwaters – barriers against waves made up of sunken ships and huge concrete chambers.

Behind the circular breakwaters was a sophisticated system of floating piers anchored to the seabed.

All of these parts were towed 30 miles across the English Channel on D-Day from southern England, then sunk into place, about a mile off France's northwest shore, the same day.

German planes doing air reconnaissance did spot the concrete chambers, which had been filled with air to make them float before they were sunk. But, according to my archival research, they had no idea what they were seeing or how these giant containers would be used.

A FLOATING SOLUTION

Once complete, each Mulberry Harbour – a code name that has no deeper meaning – gave Allied troops about 1 square mile of quiet, wave-free ocean from which to stage the invasion.

Nearly 200 military ships and landing crafts anchored at Mulberry Harbours in their first week, sending 12 military divisions, or about 180,000 men, straight into enemy territory.

Ten thousand of them were killed or injured on the first day, blown up by landmines and picked off by camouflaged German machine gun nests and blasted by artillery in concrete bunkers.

On June 19, 1944, a storm permanently disabled the Mulberry Harbour used by the American armed forces.

But Britain's Mulberry Harbour continued to serve Allied forces for another 10 months as they freed all French ports from German control.

WAR GAMES IN THE BATH

Churchill became convinced of the merit of the Mulberry Harbours design while in a bath tub on the Queen Mary, as he traveled to Washington to discuss war strategy with President Franklin Roosevelt in 1943.

Churchill's scientific adviser, Professor John Bernal, floated paper boats in the prime minister's bathtub, agitating the water to simulate waves, then used a loofah, or sponge, to demonstrate the pacifying effect of breakwaters.

Churchill, who often worked while bathing, saw in that Queen Mary bathtub the answer to the challenge he had issued in the 1942 memo commissioning portable harbors for D-Day.

"They must float up and down with the tide. The anchor problem must be mastered. Let me have the best solution worked out," Churchill wrote. "Don't argue the matter. The difficulties will argue for themselves."

To stage their invasion of Nazi-held France, Allied forces created floating harbors in the English Channel where ships could safely dock to send soldiers and supplies ashore. (Royal Air Force)

After D-Day, some Mulberry Harbours engineers were sent to the South Pacific with the idea that similar portable ports would be needed for the invasion of Japan. The atomic bombs dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki made that unnecessary.

No similar wartime engineering feat has been tried since.

OBITUARIES

Norman Davis

Norman Davis, 74, of Bedford, Kentucky, died Monday, June 3, 2019, at Baptist Health in La Grange, Kentucky.

He was born Nov. 12, 1944, in Bedford, to Gilbert Eugene and Denzil V. Welch Davis. He served his country in the U.S. Army during the Korean War. He was always willing to lend help, especially if a ride to a doctor visit or hospital was needed. He enjoyed traveling and found great pleasure in getting in his truck and going, generally out to eat, auctions or flea markets. He loved the time he spent with his morning McDonald's friends in Pendleton, Kentucky, and missed it greatly when he couldn't go anymore. In earlier years he enjoyed riding motorcycles with his late wife.

He is survived by one son, Scottie Davis of Bedford; his step-children, Patricia Jones, Bill Temple and Michael Temple, all of Milton, Kentucky, and Bob Temple and Doug Temple, both of Bedford; one granddaughter; his step-grandchildren; step great-grandchildren; and several other relatives.

He was preceded in death by his parents; the mother of his son, Lynn Williams Davis; and his second wife, Rachel Law Davis.

Funeral services will be at 11 a.m. Saturday at Ransdell Funeral Home in Bedford. Burial will follow in Bedford Cemetery.

Visitation will be at the funeral home Friday from 5 p.m. until 8 p.m. and Saturday from 9 a.m. until the service.

Online condolences can be sent at ransdellfuneral.com

Snaps for Sinners nurtures special relationship with Madison

By CHARLIE ROHLFING

Madison has a crush on the band Snaps for Sinners. And they are pretty sweet on us too. It all started when community development consultant Michael Fortunato came to Madison about a year ago to work with our arts alliance.

"Michael is a friend of ours and sometimes band member, back in northern California where we're from," said Corwin Zekley, violin player for the band. "He said, you won't believe this little town. You gotta go play there."

So they contacted Ryan Shaw and set up a gig at Off Broadway Taproom on a Tuesday night. I happened to catch that show, and they blew everybody away. That first night they were comped a room at the Riverboat Inn. Camille Fife took them to breakfast the next day. Ryan Shaw booked them for a second night at the Taproom. Jenny Mills put them up the second night. Somebody else booked them for a private house concert on the third night.

Jay Drapes, bass player for the band continued, "It was the most amazing and warm reception by a community. We actually had a show booked in Columbus, Ohio, that third night, but we told them our transmission broke and cancelled. We didn't want to leave.

"Everyone was so open and inviting and accepting. We could tell right away Madison is a very progressive town, which sort of contrasts with the old architecture. People here are receptive to new sounds and they love their music."

"I like the history of the place," said Michael Fierro, guitarist, "you can almost feel everything that has happened here over the years."

So the three of them decided to move to Madison. "There were two things driving the decision," Michael said. "First, we just couldn't afford to live in California anymore. The whole Silicon Valley thing has made the cost of living untenable, even though we were doing quite well as a band.

"The second thing was just a desire for a different community perspective, we needed to get out and experience middle America. We wanted to embrace the other, and give people a chance to embrace us. Right away Madison did just that."

But alas, they are not now Madison residents as they had hoped. They had an apartment all lined up back in April, but at the last minute the landlord told them no.

"I think he just got cold feet about having a band living upstairs," Corwin said. "It was very disappointing. We were in a bind with no place to live, but we happened on a place in Springfield, Missouri. It's nice there, but we still love Madison."

The band's music is hard to describe, but it definitely swings. It's very upbeat. The musicianship and talent are off the charts. You just need to see them for yourself, and fortunately you have a lot of opportunities in the near future.

They are playing tonight (Thursday, June 6) at the Off Broadway Taproom and Friday over in Friendship at the Tavern.

And Saturday, they are leading off the RiverRoots line-up at 2 p.m., with Michael Fortunato on sax. They also will be making another swing through Madison in late October playing at Rembrandt's and with the Nulydedz on Oct. 25th.

HOT TIP OF THE WEEK:

It's RiverRoots weekend of course, so if you love Americana roots music, it's the only place to be Friday and Saturday. Another can't-miss show is the FREE Kick-Off Party at 7 p.m. tonight, June 6, at Bicentennial Park, featuring Steve Poltz. I've been told he is a spellbinding performer. The Friday show at the Taproom with Jimmy Davis and Jordan Wilson will likely be special too. Stop by the RiverRoots Beer Tent and say "Hello" to me this weekend.

CHRIS KNIGHT

Chris Knight brings authentic Kentucky country to RiverRoots Festival 2019

By CHARLIE ROHLFING

When I hear a musician is from Kentucky, I right away think about the eastern part of the state. After all, the Appalachian region has always been a wellspring of great musical talent. But Chris Knight breaks that rule, along with so many others.

Chris is from western Kentucky, where the coal is stripped from the ground instead of dug from deep mines. He was born in the town of Slaughters (pop. 205) and today lives just up the road closer to Sebree (pop. 1,500).

Knowing how successful he's become as a singer and songwriter, I asked him why he didn't move on down to Nashville, just two hours south. His one-note bark of a laugh pretty much said it all. I sensed he didn't care for the Nashville scene.

"I've lived here all my life," Chris said, "why would I leave now? I didn't start out young in the music business like so many do. I went to Western Kentucky University and then worked as a mining consultant around the strip mines here. I got my first songwriting deal when I was about 34 and recorded my first album a couple years later."

Chris also has a powerful connection to the state of Texas, so much so that he was named an "honorary Texan" by then-Gov. Rick Perry. "It was all because of this one radio station out of Plano," Chris explained. "The music director there got hold of one of my albums and really liked it, so they started playing it a lot. People started asking us to come down and play, and it just went from there. To this day, we do real well in Texas, all over the state."

Chris has reached a point in his career where he doesn't have to push as hard.

"I play about 80 to 100 shows a year, and maybe five or six of those are festivals." In contrast, many touring bands play well over 200 shows a year. "It's worked out real well. I can pick and choose a little bit, and spend more time at home."

When I asked Chris if he'd ever heard of Madison, Indiana, his answer was fairly typical. "I've heard of the boat races," he said.

I assured him that playing RiverRoots Festival on the banks of the Ohio River will be an enjoyable and memorable experience.

"People should know up front my show is not going to sound like Top 40 country music. It's more about the lyrics and what I'm trying to say. Audiences are great these days, they listen more than they used to. And once they get what I'm doing, I feed off that energy," he said.

Chris is bringing his full band to RiverRoots on Friday, June 8th. He'll be playing the headliner slot at 9:30, right after Todd Snider. I asked Chris which songs people should listen to on YouTube if they want to get a good sample of his style. He said, "Little Victories, Hard Candy and Down The River will give them a pretty good idea."

2019 Indiana State Fair free concert schedule

Ace Frehley, Chase Rice, Melissa Ethridge, Mary Mary

Indianapolis — The Indiana State Fair has announced the first six of 17 concerts that will be part of the 2019 Indiana State Fair Free Stage headline entertainment, which returns August 2-18. Each night of the fair features a concert that is free with paid fair admission.

The first six shows announced include:

• Ace Frehley — Friday, August 2

Frehley, original guitarist and co-founder of KISS, is known for his impressive and distinctive guitar solos and flashy stage presence, Frehley was a key figure in the early success of KISS, co-writing some of the biggest hits, including "Cold Gin", "Shock Me" and "Rocket Ride." His first solo album, "Ace Frehley" was released in 1978 and was certified platinum. A man of many talents, in 2011 Frehley released his autobiography, "No Regrets- A Rock and Roll Memoir," which was received with great critical acclaim and became a New York Times Best-Seller.

• Chase Rice — Sunday, August 4

Country music maverick Chase Rice has become one of country's most exciting figures with his edgy, eclectic sound. The Tar Heel State native released his sophomore album, Lambs & Lions, featuring lead single and Top-20 hit "Three Chords & the Truth," with new label Broken Bow Records in November 2017. Follow-up single and two-week chart-topper "Eyes On You" has not only become the most-streamed song of Rice's career with more than 130 million streams and counting, it also marked his first No. 1 as an artist at country radio and remained atop the charts for two weeks.

• Pop 2000 Tour — Friday, August 9

The Pop 2000 Tour hosted by Lance Bass of *NSYNC, is the ultimate early 2000s throwback, featuring performances from fan-favorite platinum selling POP2K artists O-Town, Aaron Carter, Ryan Cabrera and Tyler Hilton. Bass, a man of many talents and a household name around the globe, is best known as a member of the group *NSYNC, which sold more than 60 million records worldwide. Multi-platinum selling artist, Aaron Carter, is well known for hits such as "I Want Candy" and "Aaron's Party (Come Get It)" and appearances on popular TV shows, including "Dancing With The Stars." As the singer and songwriter of several early 2000s hits, such as "On The Way Down," "True," and "Shine On," Ryan Cabrera was also featured frequently on MTV's "The Hills" and "Ashlee Simpson Show." Tyler Hilton, Known best by fans as Chris Keller on hit CW series, "One Tree Hill,"found musical success when his versions of "Missing You" and "When The Stars Go Blue" on the show's soundtrack reached platinum status.

• Melissa Etheridge — Thursday, August 15

Melissa Etheridge is one of rock music's great female icons. Her critically acclaimed eponymous debut album was certified double platinum. Etheridge's popularity built around such memorable songs as "Bring Me Some Water," "No Souvenirs" and "Ain't It Heavy" for which she won her first Grammy for Best Female Rock Vocal. Etheridge hit her commercial and artistic stride with her fourth album, Yes I Am, featuring the massive hits "I'm the Only One" and "Come to My Window," a searing song of longing that brought her a second Grammy. The six times platinum album spent more than two and a half years on the album chart. Etheridge is also an Oscar winner for Best Original Song in 2007.

• Everclear — ('90s iconic alt-rock hitmakers)— Friday, August 16

Everclear, a '90s alt rock group consisting of Art Alexakis (vocals, guitar), Dave French (guitar), Freddy Herrera (bass), Brian Nolan (drums), formed in 1991 in Portland, Oregon and have an impressive list of accomplishments including a 1998 Grammy nomination. The band tours extensively and takes full advantage of their large backlog of hits, as well as their more obscure tracks. By pulling material from albums such as "Afterglow," "Sparkle," "Fade," "Songs From The American Movie" and "Invisible Stars." the group seeks to keep their live act fresh yet familiar to please an array of fans.

• Gospel Music Festival headlined by Mary Mary — Sunday, August 18

Sisters Erica and Tina Campbell are a Gospel duo better known as Mary Mary. Together, they star in the WE hit reality TV series, "Mary Mary" and have received numerous accolades, including four Grammy awards, three NAACP Image Awards, two American Music Awards, a Soul Train Award, a BET award, and several more. Mary Mary has sold more than 5 million albums, toured around the world and served as a gateway to successful solo careers for both sisters.

Cubs win 24th boys golf sectional title, Rebels 2nd

Madison boys golf won its eighth-straight — and 24th overall — IHSAA sectional championship Monday at Sunrise Golf Course. Team members are (photo top, from left) coach Chris Conner, Luke Ommen, Drew Barron, Trent Jameison, Dylan Eblen and Landon McDowell. Jenning's County's Bryce Kirchner (below) was the low medalist with a one-under 71 while Southwestern's Hunter Mefford (right) was runner-up at 72 and Madison's Drew Barron (above) was third with a 74. Madison may have not had the low-medalist or even the individual runner-up, but the Cubs' superior depth carried them to their eighth-straight IHSAA Boys Golf Sectional title Monday at Sunrise Golf Course.

Madison shot a 319 to edge county rival Southwestern by eight strokes. Jennings County was third with a 335 as all three punched their tickets to the regional at Champions Pointe Golf Club in Henryville on Thursday.

Jennings' Bryce Kirchner fired a one-under 71 to lead the field, just one stroke ahead of Southwestern's Hunter Mefford. Madison had the next two lowest scores and had all four scorers shoot 90 or better to win its 24th sectional crown.

"They closed well. I was nervous at the turn. I really wasn't sure at the turn how it would turn out," Madison coach Chris Conner said. "But Dylan (Eblen) played one of his best nine holes all year, Drew (Barron) shot two under and the other three stayed steady. I was really proud of the way they finished."

Madison couldn't have gotten off to a worse start with four of the five players taking at least a bogey on No. 1 and only Luke Ommen, who was at one-under 35, anywhere near par at the turn.

But taking advantage of a back nine that they know so well, the Cubs kicked it into high gear over the final nine holes to distance themselves from their two top competitors.

Barron led the way with a 74, which was good for third overall, while Ommen shot a 75 to tie for fourth. Trent Jameison fired an 80, Eblen carded a 90 and Landon McDowell had a non-scoring 97.

"They deserved this. They've worked hard the last four weeks after we struggled a little bit at conference," Conner said. "We rededicated our practices and they worked hard and it paid off."

Southwestern has also been working hard and it paid off in the Rebels' best-ever showing in a sectional tournament.

Southwestern was led by Mefford, who finished even-par with an unusual round that featured only two birdies and two bogeys to go with 14 pars.

"Honestly, it was kind of boring. It was just making pars, getting a couple of birdies and having a couple of bogeys. The best way I can describe it was boring," Mefford said.

"Sometimes boring is pretty good in golf," Southwestern coach David Bright said laughing. "He played in a state amateur qualifier on Saturday and he played on greens that were probably 13 on the stint meter and he comes here it's probably running at a nine or nine and a half. He left a lot of putts dead center of the hole and that even-par round could very easily have been a 68. Boring for him is good because that's solid and that's what is going to give us that baseline score that we need from him all of the time."

Mefford's round was nearly matched by Trenton Hadley, who shot a 75 to tie Ommen for fourth-best on the day. Austin Kramer worked his way through a rough round to shoot an 82 while Camden Ashby shot a 98 that included an eagle on the par-five No. 15. Billy Tingle had a non-scoring 114.

"Austin had a tough day and I'm sure that he thinks he should have shot about four or five strokes better. But that's one of the great things about our team. If one guy has a down day another can pick him up and Trenton had a great round," Bright said. "(Ashby) is probably capable of shooting in the low 90s and he was in the high 90s which is what our goal was and what gives us a chance. All in all, we came in here and did what we set out to do so you have to be happy with that."

"Trent played really well and Austin didn't play as well as he was hoping to, but he hung in there and shot a 39 on the back nine," Mefford said. "I'm just really proud of all of our teammates for all of the hard work that they've put in all year. It finally came together on a really important day with four teams that are pretty much similar and we're going to make it to the regional."

Neither Shawe nor Switzerland County had any golfers qualify for regional.

Switzerland placed sixth overall with a 379 led by Garrett Demaree, who shot an 86 and missed the regional cut by four strokes. Tyler Konkle shot an 87, Austin Wolf carded a 94, Aaron Bladen had a 112 and Morgan Gammons took a non-scoring 129.

Shawe did not field a complete team and was unable to post a team score. Chandler Cole led the Hilltoppers with an 87, Trenton Purvis had a 103 and Jack Grote carded a 110.

In addition to the three team qualifiers, three other players qualified for the regional as individuals from non-advancing teams: Blake Stamper of Austin with a 76, Derek Rockey of Scottsburg with an 80, and Weston Allen of Henryville with an 82.

The regional at Champions Pointe will tee off at 8 a.m. with individual tee times being announced later this week.

Last year, Madison finished third in the event and Mefford was fifth overall as both earned berths to the state finals. Considered by many to be the toughest regional in the state, just being in contention is considered a success.

"We shot a 319 today, but I don't think that will cut it on Thursday," Conner said with a smile. "I think we need to have a 310 or better and hope and pray because anything over that isn't going to do it against Center Grove, Columbus North or Floyd. They're all going to be under 310. If we're not down there, we don't have a chance. But that's why we play it. Go down there and see what happens."

"That's a really good regional, but I think we're capable. We're just going to have to play a little better than we played today," Mefford said. "Like I told them on the bus this morning: tunnel vision. Don't worry about who we're playing with, just go out there and worry about what you're doing and play well."

Shawe hires Bower as new AD

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Jamison Bower has been hired as the new athletic director at Shawe Memorial High School, the school announced on Monday.

Bower replaces Steve Sims, who resigned the position earlier this spring to go into the classroom where he will teach sixth grade at Pope John Elementary starting this fall.

Bower comes to Shawe with an extensive athletic background. A graduate of Purdue University, Bower has coached soccer at Harrison High School in Lafayette as well as at West Lafayette High School. His wife Alyssa Hall Bower graduated from Shawe in 2007 and the couple and their family have been looking to move back to the Madison area for some time.

"I have always heard such great things from my wife, Alyssa, and my in-laws about Shawe Memorial and the Hilltopper community. I am extremely excited to become a part of it," Bower said in a release. "Since pursuing my degree in education from Purdue University, I have aspired to become an athletic director and I am grateful for this amazing opportunity. I greatly look forward to starting this next chapter of my career here at Shawe, working with all the faculty and staff, and contributing to the continued success of the students in both academics and athletics."

"It is difficult to find a person with all the skills that go into being a successful athletic director. We were looking for a person with an educational background, who has been around and has a love of sports, and someone who is well organized," Shawe principal Curt Gardner said. "We believe we have found that person in Bower."

Sims, who has served as athletic director for the past seven years, will remain in the capacity through most of the summer. Bower takes over the AD duties officially starting on Aug. 1.

Tereshko, Mefford qualify for Indiana State Amateur

Local golfers Brandon Tereshko and Hunter Mefford have both qualified for the Indiana Amateur Championships to be held in two weeks in Noblesville.

Tereshko, a 2010 Madison Consolidated High School graduate and the current head men's and women's golf coach at Hanover College, earned his second-straight trip to the Championship with an impressive three-under 69 to win the qualifier at Otter Creek Golf Course near Columbus on Monday. One of Tereshko's players at Hanover, sophomore Caleb Lung, also qualified at Otter Creek by tying for 15th with a six-over 78.

Mefford, who just recently graduated from Southwestern High School and who will play at Purdue-Fort Wayne in the fall, tied for 15th with an 81 in the qualifier at the Bloomington Country Club on Saturday. Mefford, who will compete in the IHSAA Regional at Champions Pointe on Thursday, will be making his first appearance in the state amateur.

The Indiana Amateur Championships will be held June 17-20 at Purgatory Golf Club in Noblesville.

Thurston fans 4 in 2 scoreless innings against former club Chicago

GARY — Madison's Ryan Thurston pitched another two scoreless innings of American Association baseball relief — this time against his former team the Chicago Dogs — in a 12-3 SouthShore Railcats loss on Tuesday.

Thurston, who began the season with Chicago before being picked up on waivers by Gary, came on in teh sixth inning and pitched a scoreless sxith and seventh allowing not hits and striking out four with just one walk to stand 1-0 with a 1.00 ERA on the season.

Thurston, a 2013 Madison graduate is now in his second season of pro baseball out of Western Kentucky.

BRIDGE

ONE LOSER TOO MANY, ONE WINNER TOO FEW

Donald R. Gannon said, "Where facts are few, experts are many."

In bridge, when winners are few, losers are many. However, on some deals, you can turn losers into winners. Learning how to do that is one of the stepping stones to success at the game.

In today's deal, how should South plan the play in four spades after West leads the club queen?

Declarer is faced with four losers: two hearts, one diamond and one club. He has only nine winners: six spades, one diamond and two clubs. Hmm -- troubling. If only dummy had had one more heart and one fewer club.

South must try to establish dummy's diamond suit, making the fifth card in the suit a winner. That requires losing one diamond trick, then trumping two diamonds in hand. How many dummy entries does declarer need, and where are they?

For two ruffs, South needs three dummy entries: two for the ruffs and one to return to the dummy to cash the 13th diamond. Those entries must be the spade queen, spade 10 and diamond ace. However, an entry counts only if declarer can immediately ruff a diamond in his hand.

The key play occurs at trick two: South must lead a diamond from his hand and play low from the board. Suppose East returns a club. Declarer takes that trick, cashes the spade ace, plays a diamond to the ace (entry one), ruffs a diamond high, crosses to the board with a spade to the 10 (entry two), ruffs another diamond high, plays a spade to the queen (entry three) and discards a loser on the diamond nine.

NCAA recommends women's wrestling as 'emerging sport'

By LUKE MEREDITH
AP Sports Writer

The NCAA committee on women's athletics recommended Monday that all three divisions add women's wrestling as an emerging sport, a key step toward making it a championship-level sport.

If the recommendation is approved, women's wrestling as well as acrobatics and tumbling would be added as emerging sports Aug. 1, 2020.

A sport must have at least 20 varsity teams and/or competitive club teams to be considered for the program, and at least 40 varsity teams for NCAA championship consideration.

The Wrestle Like a Girl organization and USA Wrestling said there are 23 NCAA schools with women's wrestling teams, including Texas A&M and Colorado State. There are 13 other schools planning to add the sport either next year or in 2020-21. The National Collegiate Acrobatics and Tumbling Association said 29 NCAA colleges and universities sponsor the sport.

The emerging sports program, which offers sponsorship options and helps schools meet financial aid and other requirements, began in 1994. It has helped several sports have reached championship status, including beach volleyball and ice hockey. Equestrian, rugby and triathlon are all currently competing as emerging sports.

A coalition of wrestling organizations and the U.S. Olympic Committee submitted an application for emerging sport status in 2017. The committee said it applauded the continued growth of women's wrestling, noting the sport is relatively inexpensive to sponsor and that doing so would add coaching opportunities for women.

"This is a great day for wrestling," said Rich Bender, executive director of USA Wrestling. "We are encouraged by today's decision, and fully expect it to help accelerate the growth of women's wrestling."

Increasing opportunities for women to wrestle has been a major focus for the sport in recent years after it was briefly dropped from the Olympic program in 2013. A lack of gender equity played a role in the decision by the International Olympic Committee. Six of the 18 weights contested at the last two Olympics, in London and Rio de Janeiro, were for women, and a women's gold medal match will cap the competition in each of the last six days of the tournament at the 2020 Tokyo Games.

Japan has won 11 of the 18 Olympic gold medals given out in women's wrestling.

Big Ten Conference names Vikes' Warren as new commissioner

By ANDREW SELIGMAN
AP Sports Writer

ROSEMONT, Ill. — Kevin Warren keeps a picture in his office of Curt Flood. There's another of Jackie Robinson, one of Texas Western's barrier-bulldozing 1966 NCAA championship basketball team and Dr. Martin Luther King's letter from "Letter from Birmingham Jail."

Warren understood the significance of the moment Tuesday as he became the first black commissioner of a Power Five conference. The Big Ten hired the Minnesota Vikings executive to replace Jim Delany, bringing on a former college basketball player and sports agent with a law degree from Notre Dame to lead one of the most lucrative leagues in the country.

"It's really about diversity, inclusion and it really is about opportunity," Warren said. "One of the things I will stand for here is to make sure regardless of your background — regardless of your race, color, creed, gender, ethnicity, sexual orientation — this will be a place from an exclusive standpoint that we will embrace everyone and give everyone an opportunity to be the best they can be."

He will start Sept. 16 and work alongside Delany, who will step down Jan. 1 from the job he has held since 1989. The 71-year-old Delany announced his decision to step away earlier this year. At the time, he planned to stay on until June 30, 2020.

It's not the first pioneering role for the 55-year-old Warren. He has been the chief operating officer for the Vikings since 2015, the first African-American to hold that position for an NFL franchise. And now comes another milestone among the Power Five, which includes the Southeastern, Pac-12, Big 12 and Atlantic Coast conferences.

"Do I think about it every single day? Yes," Warren said. "But I also remember it provides me with an opportunity to make sure that I send the elevator back down to give people who — other people may not have given an opportunity to people who look like me — to remember that. And to make sure that I perform at the highest possible level to open up the door to the next person regardless of their color."

Indiana President Michael McRobbie said the Big Ten considered more than 60 candidates. He would not say how many were interviewed. But there were multiple meetings with Warren, with the decision to hire him made on Sunday. Vikings owners Mark and Zygi Wilf had nothing but praise for Warren.

"He has worked tirelessly to elevate the Vikings franchise, all with the greater good of the organization and Minneapolis-St. Paul in mind," the Wilfs said in a statement. Warren said he and the Vikings haven't decided on his end date in Minnesota. The owners said they would work with Warren on "how we want to move forward."

Warren became emotional during the news conference, particularly when discussing his parents as well as the late SEC Commissioner Mike Slive.

He recalled a mutual friend arranging a meeting with Slive in the early 1990s at The Palmer House in Chicago — the famed hotel where the Big Ten was born and brownies invented in the 1890s. By the time he drove back to South Bend, Indiana, Slive had left a message on his answering machine offering him a job at his legal firm, where he started working on NCAA infractions cases.

Warren also remembered the tough obstacles he faced just to get back to walking let alone playing sports again after he got run over by a car. Just 11 years old, the kid who grew up in Phoenix was riding his bike with friends that summer day.

He heard paramedics say he might not make it but he wound up in traction and then a body cast with a broken right femur to go with a fractured wrist. As he was preparing to leave the hospital, a doctor told him swimming would give him the best shot at recovery, though the odds were not good.

Warren persuaded his parents to use some of his $30,000 settlement to install a pool in the backyard, arguing that community pools aren't open every day and they might not always be able to take him there. The future lawyer made such a strong case they had one built for $11,000, a life-changing decision for their son.

Along with the physical benefits from all those hours in the pool, whether he was swimming laps or playing "Marco Polo," there was this.

"When you actually pay for something, you appreciate it more," said Warren, who saved his mangled Schwinn until the movers threw it away after his father died. "For me at 11 years old, to formally write the check on something like that ... That made me mature at a really young age. And it saved my life."

Warren attended the University of Pennsylvania out of high school, but transferred to Grand Canyon University, where he scored 1,118 points. After earning an MBA from Arizona State and that law degree, he worked as a sports agent throughout the 1990s. Warren has been working in the NFL for 20 years.

This was the happiest day. I had made it thru the Normandy invasion, Omaha Beach. Thank God. I would soon be back home and a 30-day leave. I will always remember how lucky I was and will remember those that were killed. It is very sad that we have to settle disputes by fighting wars.

James E. Wynn - June 8, 1945

James E. Wynn was born Jan. 7, 1921, in Deputy, Indiana, to William E. and Margaret Ellen Dooley Wynn. He entered the U.S. Navy July 29, 1942. On June 6, 1944, this farm boy, the fourth of seven children, found himself off the coast of France where he participated in the Allied invasion of Normandy. His sons, Steve and David, while settling their father's estate and sorting papers in 2004, found a diary and pictures their father had kept — hopes and fears never shared with the rest of his family then alive. Steve Wynn and his wife, Sherri, shared what they found in a book they put together for friends and family on the 60th anniversary of D-Day. On this 75th anniversary, they have provided the diary and photos.

Most of the information in the diary is from the time Jim, as he was called by friends and family, was stationed and fighting in Europe and includes comments from the preparation for and implementation of the D-Day Invasion in 1944 when Jim landed at Omaha Beach. As far as we know, Jim never shared this diary with anyone, except perhaps his wife, Irene.

Jim's handwriting was sometimes hurried and the diary was often written in pencil. Even the penciled entries, however, have remained remarkably legible. This diary speaks poignantly in the voice of a young man in his early twenties who found himself thousands of miles away from home, bouncing around oceans and continents as he waited for the day he could come home to Deputy, Indiana.

We hope you enjoy reading Jim's words as we remember his life, and the lives of so many others who never had the chance to finish their own diaries.

— Steve and Sherri Wynn

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS
ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE

England
6-June 1944

Soldiers, Sailors and Airmen of the Allied Expeditionary Force!

You are about to embark upon the Great Crusade, toward which we have striven these many months. The eyes of the world are upon you. The hopes and prayers of liberty - loving people everywhere march with you. In company with our brave Allies and brothers-in-arms on other Fronts, you will bring about the destruction of the German war machine, the elimination of Nazi tyranny over the oppressed peoples of Europe, and security for ourselves in a free world.

Your task will not be an easy one. Your enemy is well trained, well equipped and battle-hardened. He will fight savagely.

But this is the year 1944 ! Much has happened since the Nazi triumphs of 1940-41. The United Nations have inflicted upon the Germans great defeats, in open battle, man-to-man. Our air offensive has seriously reduced their strength in the air and their capacity to wage war on the ground. Our Home Fronts have given us an overwhelming superiority in weapons and munitions of war, and placed at our disposal great reserves of trained fighting men. The tide has turned ! The free men of the world are marching together to Victory !

I have full confidence in your courage, devotion to duty and skill in battle. We will accept nothing less than full Victory !

Good Luck ! And let us all beseech the blessing of Almighty God upon this great and noble undertaking.

The Following Pages Contain the Diary of My Life in the Service

The sad story of my Navy life began on July 29, 1942 at 5:30 p.m. I was sworn in the Navy at Indianapolis, Indiana. The following afternoon I was sent to Great Lakes, IL. For my boot training, I was located in one of the nicest camps Great Lakes Has (Camp Moffet). The following days were very dreadful or I thought they were at that time. I worked polishing brass, steel wooling decks or marching all day long. The first three nights I had a 12 to 4 a.m. watch (Dog Watch). I had begun to think my days were numbered but after a few days I began to feel better. I began to look forward to my boot leave. I had one 36- hour liberty while in boots. I had a nice time in Chicago. On September 5, I left the Great Lakes for my 9- day leave. When the 9 days were up I returned to the Great Lakes and went into O.G.U. to await transfer. I was sent to Columbia Missouri (University of Missouri) on September 27, 1942. There I went to Diesel School. I really enjoyed the three months I spent in Missouri.

December 2, 1942, I graduated from Diesel School. I was raised in rate from A5 to MoMM2/c. I was in the hospital from the 2nd of December until the 18th.

December19, 1942 I left Columbia, Missouri and started for Paradise Creek, Portsmouth, VA. I arrived there the 21st. Was granted a 4-day leave for Christmas so I went home. I had one day and a half at home. On returning to VA, I just loafed for about two weeks awaiting further transfer.

January 4, 1943 I was transferred to Salmons, Maryland to be assigned. It was a new base and not very well organized, therefore we had no accommodations. I was assigned to an L.S. T. Crew 4121. Was on L.S. T. 340 for about two weeks then transferred to L.S.T. 346. I didn't enjoy any of them.

On February 12, 1943 I went to the Norfolk Naval Hospital for an operation. Was in the hospital until May 9, 1943. I was then transferred to N.O.B. Norfolk, VA for assignment. I was there about a week and transferred to Little Creek, VA Amphibious Training Base. I was put in small boats and trained there until July 8, 1943.

On September 15, 1943 we went back to Little Creek VA and received a four- day leave. On return, we were sent to New York. We were stationed at Fido Beach, Long Island until October 9, 1943, then transferred to Pier 92, New York. We all enjoyed the stay in New York even though we were all short on cash.

We went aboard the Cincia (English transport) on the 20th day of October and sailed the 21st. It was a very unpleasant trip across but all were thankful we had no trouble or scares from the Germans. We were very crowded on the ship. We ate and did our sleeping all in the same little compartment. The food was very poor, dreadful to look at, let alone eat. The coffee looked like dish water. We only ate twice a day. I would wait until I was almost starved before I could eat it.

It was on Halloween morning that we sighted land. We found out later it was Northern Ireland. Two days later we docked in Bristol, England. We were all very glad to get there even though the city looked very rough.

At 10 p.m. that night we took a train across country to Fowey, our new home. We arrived at 6:30 a.m. It was raining and so dark you couldn't see your hand before you. We marched about a mile through narrow winding streets, uphill and downhill. We stood in line for chow and it was light by the time I got chow. It was a very pretty place. Two little towns on each side of a channel. Town was built up the sides of the mountains.

We started to work to build a base. It was very hard and tiresome work because of the climate. It seemed as if it rained every day.

On November 12, at 4 a.m. the air raid alarm sounded. We all hurried out and within 10 or 15 minutes we could hear the roaring of guns and the sound of motors over Plymouth which was about 30 miles away. Fire was flying in every direction. Three planes circle over our little town three times. It was a very sad feeling because at that time we had no guns or anything to fight back with, but no bombs were dropped. That morning I had to go to Plymouth after my boat. There were 25 new boats there and we had to get these down to Fowey. I was glad because I wanted to see what a city looked like after an air raid.

I never realized that a city could be torn up so badly. I had seen pictures but nothing real like that. We were unable to take the boats back that night because of the mines the German plans had laid all night. We stayed there that night. I saw several horrible sights.

Days passed by with no excitement outside of the hard work we were doing in trying to get ready for what we thought might happen. On

Distinguished Citizens Award Winners

Saying 'thank you' to the Lees

Lt. Vinal and Capt. Brenna Lee were named distinguished citizens Tuesday by the City of Madison for their service in the Madison and Jefferson County communities. Madison Mayor Damon Welch gave the Lees a placque in appreciation. The Lees were appointed to the Madison Salvation Army in June 2015. They announced in early May that they were being reassigned to the Salvation Army Indianapolis-Fountain Square Corps (Church). Capt. Lee has also received an additional appointment as the Indiana Division's Intercultural Ministries Coordinator. Lt. Lee said this week they would be forever grateful for their time in Madison and they weren't expecting to be honored when they asked to come speak and say goodbye at Tuesday's regular city council meeting. Lieutenants Justin and Stephanie Hartley will be taking over the Madison Salvation Army at the end of the month. They are moving from Clinton, Iowa, with their three boys Landon, 6, Noah, 3, and Asher, 13 months. The Lee's Farewell Sunday will be June 23, and the Hartley's Welcome Sunday will be June 30. State, Youth Institute team to keep talent in rural areas

Lt. Governor Suzanne Crouch and the Indiana Office of Community and Rural Affairs (OCRA) have partnered with the Indiana Youth Institute to retain talent and build assets in rural areas for future generations.

"It is so important that young people in our communities are becoming engaged in their areas," Crouch said. "When you have a personal stake in your hometown, you are more likely to stay there, which in turn will increase economic development in our state."

Rural communities are invited to apply for an opportunity to launch a Promise Indiana initiative in their county. This program works with collaborative communities to encourage saving behaviors while engaging local schools and community and youth organizations.

"We are excited to partner with the Indiana Youth Institute and Promise Indiana to provide this opportunity to rural communities," said Jodi Golden, Executive Director of OCRA. "The program benefits not only the community with increasing leadership and capacity building, but also creates a strong sense of place for rural youth."

Promise Indiana also ensures that every child has the assets, champions and community support to pursue their dreams by leveraging the entire community to begin saving for post-secondary education and training.

"This is a wonderful opportunity for rural communities to help open the doors to postsecondary education for their children," said Tami Silverman, President, and CEO of the Indiana Youth Institute. "We are thrilled to work with our partners to expand the Promise Indiana initiative and ensure that all Hoosier youth thrive."

Those interested can submit an application for Promise Indiana by June 30, 2019, which will evaluate the potential capacity of communities based on the following criteria: demonstrated alignment to the program, including leadership partnerships; strength of potential strategy and action; presence of available local skillsets; local community accountability; ability to leverage local resources; and projected geographic reach.

Five communities will be chosen to receive a wide array of capacity-building services from the Indiana Youth Institute with Promise Indiana. These services will help develop a plan in preparation to become a Promise Indiana community. Fore more information and to access the application, go to promiseindiana.org

Saliga on Oklahoma City honor roll

Christina Saliga of Pendleton, Kentucky, was named on the president's honor roll at Oklahoma City University for the Spring 2019 semester. Students must complete a minimum of 12 credit hours during a semester and maintain a grade point average of 3.9 or higher to meet the president's honor roll requirements.

Oklahoma City University is a non-profit, comprehensive, private United Methodist university and offers a wide variety of degrees in the liberal arts, fine arts, sciences and business.

PETS OF THE WEEK

The shelter is currently DESPERATE for soft canned KITTEN food and Adult dog hard food and Puppy soft/hard food. It is a crazy start to Cat and Kitten season. Volunteers and fosters are still needed more than ever.

The Madison-Jefferson County Animal Shelter currently has 15 dogs or puppies, and 17 cats or kittens available. Pictures of additional pets waiting for adoption can be viewed at www.sisaveapet.com

Normal shelter hours are Monday, Thursday and Friday from noon to 5 p.m., Wednesday from 1 p.m. to 7 p.m., Saturday from noon to 4 p.m., and Sunday from noon to 3 p.m. It is closed Tuesday. The shelter number is (812) 273-1788 and the email is animal.shelter39@jeffersoncounty.in.gov

All cats and kittens are $45 off unless they are already spay or neutered. Discount is courtesy of the Animal Shelter and the Jefferson County Humane Society.

Volunteers are always welcome at the shelter. Individuals must be at least 16 years old to volunteer. Volunteers can help with everyday cleaning, answering phones, and exercising the pets. Contact the shelter for details.

The shelter is a registered organization with the Kroger Community Rewards program. To support the shelter, register a Kroger card at www.krogercommunityrewards.com and enter FL919.

Support the shelter while walking your dog. Use the "Walk for a Dog" or "Woof-Trax" app available through the App Store or Google Play. For each mile walked, a donation is made to the shelter.

A list of needed items can be found on the shelter website. Donations can be mailed to 2727 Hannah Drive, Madison, IN 47250 or dropped off during shelter hours. The shelter also accepts aluminum and steel cans, which are recycled and the proceeds put toward the medical fund. Recent donations have helped get treatment for a beagle with a skin infection and a cat with wounds. The shelter asks that aluminum and steel donations be separated. Steel cans should also be rinsed before they are dropped off. Cans can be dropped off at anytime in a bin located on the east side of the shelter.

Those with missing pets can stop by the shelter, call or email a complete description of the pet, when and where it was last seen, the owner's name and contact information, and a picture of the pet. Pets are held for three days before they are made available for adoption.

Animals should not be abandoned outside of the shelter or dropped off at the shelter after hours.

For animal control issues in Madison, call (812) 265-3347. For animal control issues in Hanover and Jefferson County, call (812) 265-2648.

LUCY

Hi! I'm Lucy. I'm a 2-year-old female terrier mix. I am a very playful gal who is timid indoors in the shelter kennel. Be sure to take me out of the kennel environment so I can show you my true colors. A nice lady helped me out of a rough situation and got me into the shelter so I could find the home I deserve. I do well with most dogs, but please bring your dog to meet me to be sure. I will alert to strangers who come to your property also. I'm up-to-date on vaccinations. My adoption fee is $30 plus the cost of my spay. I have a $30.00 sponsorship from a staff member who knows I am a great dog! She has taken me out of the shelter for a break just to be sure how well I would adapt.

LUNA

MINNIE

Hi! We're Luna and Minnie. We are 6 years old and came from the same home and are bonded.

We are both spayed and are very loving now that we are together again! $90 to adopt us both, plus the cost of our rabies vaccinations.

Looking for a way to break the cycle of addiction and change

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: I'm a mother to five beautiful children. I do not have custody of any of them. I'm an addict, and I refuse to raise my kids the way my parents raised me. I want them to have and see a better life than I did. Growing up wasn't great for me. We were homeless. Sleeping in backyards in tents wasn't cool. My siblings and I had to transfer schools all the time.

I didn't graduate from high school, although I did sure get a degree from the School of Hard Knocks. I had my first kid at 18 and gave him and my parental rights up to my brother. As an adult, I started smoking meth and marijuana and drinking. I was in jail by age 22. In my early 20s, I had my second kid and gave him up for adoption because I knew I wasn't done with the cycle of drug use and jail. As for my third kid, I have joint legal custody of him because I don't have stability. And my last two kids live with their father, my ex-husband. I've relapsed, and I hate who I am today. I want better for me so I can be better for my kids. Do you have any advice for me that I don't already know? Changing for the better, and getting clean and sober, has been so hard for me. Though I have done it in the past and loved it. I had a great church family and lost them because of my addiction. Help me be better. I want to be better.

– Bad Mom

Dear Mom: Few people have easy roads in life, but yours has been especially difficult. Growing up without housing likely left you with anxiety issues, and substance abuse became a coping mechanism. Try to show yourself some compassion. No one ever hated herself into self-improvement. Becoming the person you want to be starts with forgiving yourself for the person you've been.

You asked me to give you some advice that you haven't heard before. I'm going to give you advice you probably have. But even if you've heard this a hundred times, it's worth hearing a hundred more: I strongly urge you to attend Narcotics Anonymous, Alcoholics Anonymous or another program such as LifeRing. I believe such a support group will offer the sense of community and family that your spirit craves.

Dear Annie: I'm responding to the writer who sent advice regarding adopting an older cat. Their advice was spot on except for their final advice to provide the name of an animal shelter to which the cat should be sent to upon an owner's untimely death. As a longtime shelter volunteer, the cruelest thing that can happen to an animal whose guardian has passed is to be sent to an animal shelter. Older animals have little chance of adoption, and they will most likely end up euthanized. Is that what any loving pet owner wants for their beloved pet?

In most states, there are privately run long-term care facilities for aging animals where they can live out their lives peacefully. Every pet owner should visit those facilities to confirm that they are properly licensed and operated responsibility. Make it clear in your family trust what is to happen to your pets upon your death, and provide funds for their lifelong care. Far too many animals end up in shelters. Don't add to that population.

– Animal Love in New Mexico

Dear Animal Lover: I was unaware of these until I got your letter and looked into it more, but there are indeed "pet retirement homes" or "sanctuaries." I echo your statement that owners should be sure to visit the facilities personally and ensure they're properly licensed and offer animals adequate, humane care. Thanks for writing.

November 21, we were transferred to Appledore, England for more training in small boats operations.

On our way to Appledore, one of our trucks ran into a building and injured 5 enlisted men and two officers. I helped take them to the hospital (115 Station Hospital was near Tavistock). After getting them there, I found that the officer who was supposed to come by and pick me up had already gone on so I was left there. Transportation was very hard to get. I was there at the hospital for two days and a half. I really enjoyed it as I needed a rest. I reached Appledore about 7 p.m. on the 24th of November. It was very cold and a very heavy wind was coming in from sea. Because of the heavy tide and winds the boats had to be moved that night. We (our crew) didn't know anything about the channel and no lights were used so it was very hard for us to move a boat. We moved one but landed it about 2 miles in the opposite direction from which we were supposed to go. The tide went out and left us sitting on the beach. We liked to froze that night. We finally left the boat and went into the station about 10:30 a.m. the next morning. I was sure disgusted with Appledore. We continued working very long hours. Every day we are getting closer to the day we make our invasion. Exactly where we do not know.

December 12th, we left Appledore and started back to our home base at Fowey expecting to stay there until after the first of the year but on the 20th of December, we left Fowey in our small boats and headed up the English Channel. We stopped in Plymouth for two nights. While we were there, we had our living quarters on L.S.T. 346. On the 23rd of December, we started on up the English Channel and stopped in Dartsmouth. How long we will be here is not known. The English Channel is the roughest water I was ever in. It seemed to toss our boats around like bath tubs. On the 24th of December, about 100 other amphibious boats came into Dartsmouth. It may be maneuvers or it could be the real thing.

Christmas Eve and Christmas Day, I spent on board L.S.T. 345. We had a real nice turkey dinner. I spent a very disgusted and discouraged day. But better days will come. I wrote 12 letters Christmas Day.

During the next few days we worked on our boats and began to make ready for the mock invasion. January 1, 1944 was a beautiful day. We enjoyed a very nice dinner. Our mock invasion lasted three days from January 1st until the 3rd. We left Dartsmouth on January 6th for Plymouth. The Channel was really rough. The roughest water I had ever had a small boat in. I thought that the boat would turn over before we reached Plymouth. That was the toughest day I ever had. I sure hope I don't have any more like it. We stayed in Plymouth overnight and headed for Fowey the next morning, January 7th, my birthday. The Channel was calm and it was a pretty nice ride.

January 11th, 1944, we got a five -day leave. I had £180 (pounds) and I decided I would have a good time if possible. I went to London and really had nice time.

January 16th, back from leave and started back to work. January 20th continued to work around base. The 500 -man camp opened up and Beach Jumpers moved in.

February 10th, all the U.P. crews were transferred from the base. They went on different L.S.T. The six M crews were all the old men left on the base.

February 14th, a new group came over from the States. We took care of the boats and they went to sea every day. Some days we worked from 0700 until 2000 8 p.m. (long hours) but enjoyed the work. Continued to do that work until April.

April 10th, I took my test for Motor Mac first class and passed…

April 15th, we were given orders to pack our gear and put it in our L.C.M. and be underway within three hours. We met a convoy about 10 miles from Fowey and proceeded to Plymouth. We tied up to an L.S.T. that night and the next morning met another convoy of CM and proceeded up the English Channel. About 5 p.m. we reached our destination, Tiegmouth. There were 90 L.C. M. at the base. We worked on our boats for the next week.

April 28th, we left Tiegmouth about 11 a.m. going on maneuvers. We traveled along about 8 RPM. There were twenty of our L.C.M. and about 40 English barges in the convoy. About 1 a.m. the next morning we were all startled by gunfire and big explosions close by. Off our port bow we could see a big fire flaming in the sky and it was very close because we saw the barges ahead in the light from the fire. In just a few minutes another big fire shot into the air. We could see that it was a ship. By this time the escort boat in from turned us around and headed us in the opposite direction. We were glad to get away because the boats in front were being fired into. Luckily, no damage to any of the small crafts. We continued to travel that night and went back into Tiegmouth about noon. The base was moved from Tiegmouth to Waymouth that day. That afternoon we learned that there were two L.S.T. sunk that night and another badly damaged. 1300 sailors and soldiers killed by 5 German E-boats.

We stayed at Tiegmouth that night and came on to Waymouth the following day. The fellows that came up the day before picked up 60 dead sailors and soldiers on their way up.

Here at Waymouth, we load ships and are getting them ready for the invasion that is coming off soon. We hope.

We have an air raid every night. May 14th, about 2 a.m. two German planes were shot down here. We saw a very exciting time for about two hours.

May 20th, we moved to Poole, England. Our boats are loaded with TNT for the invasion.

June 2nd, we go aboard our boats and we are told all about the invasion. Given maps of the beach, etc.

June 4th, at 2 a.m. we leave Poole harbor and meet a convoy. We travel until two o'clock that afternoon and came back to harbor when the invasion was called off or put off one day.

June 5th, at 2 a.m. we start out journey again, travel all day Monday and at 5 a.m. June 6th, we were 20 miles off the French coast.We reported to a transport and loaded 30 soldiers on our boat and it was time for our wave to head for the beach. We hit the beach at 6:36 a.m. It was real light. The battle was on and cruisers were opening fire on the beach.

Even though we were the second wave in, there were several men on the beach and the Jerries were pouring lead everywhere. You could hear bullets hitting the sides of the boat and glancing.

We found on the third day that three of the 30 men we took on the beach were still living. The boats that hit the beach beside us were hit by a German 88 before the soldiers got off.

From June 2nd until June 20th, seemed more like a horrible dream than anything else. We worked long hours and when we did get a little time to rest we had to sleep on that 50 foot boat. I did manage to sleep after I went so long.

Around June 14th, the storm started which lasted about a week. It wrecked more boats than were lost on D-Day. On July 4th, we were sent back to England to rest. We were sent to Poole. Bournemouth was only 4 miles. I really had a nice time for about a month.

July 29th, we arrived at Dartsmouth, England. I went to work at Engine Repair, was there about a week.

August 6th, we went back to France and I went to work again. We worked from 8 a.m. until 10 p.m. unloading soldiers, supplies and doing shuttle work. We did have a place to sleep. (the Wheelock, a liberty ship). We left France for the last time on September 5. Came to Dartsmouth on L.S.D., then we were transferred to Vicarage, a receiving and shipping out base. We were stopped to go home but luck wasn't so good. We were all split up.

September 20th, my buddy (Red Carpenter) and I were transferred to Shafter Field in Plymouth. We were put in Transportation and in about three months we transferred to Engine Repair.

On March 1st, 1945, I received my first -class rate. On June 8th, I was transferred to Vicarage for state side draft.

And here the diary entries end. On the back few pages, 22 names of servicemen and their addresses are listed, apparently with the hope of keeping in touch with each other after they all shipped back home. There were also 27 names and addresses listed after those 22 names on a page with the heading, "The Folks Back Home." The name Jesse Wynn, Jim's brother, is listed as being on the U.S.S. Nevada, and a postscript note is added after the name of Oscar Holland of Roanoke, Virginia: "Killed when L.S.T. sunk June 10, 1944."

U.S. Cemetery at Normandy, the final resting place of many of the troops who stormed the beaches on June 6, 1944.

Let us all pause to remember the sacrifices of the men and women of Operation Overlord.

During the Second World War, General Motors stopped production of cars and trucks for retail sales. Instead, they focused their energies, ingenuity, employees and plants on producing the parts and machines needed to win the battles and secure the freedom of the United States and the world.
